Missa JOHNOUCHI (Musician, UNESCO Artist for Peace)

While being registered at the Academic Institute of Music of Toho, section theory of musical composition, she began her activities of composition in the field of audio-visual for television success series, publicities and the cinema. Since 1988, Missa Johnouchi is accompanied by the National Opera Orchestra of Paris and the National Orchestra of Paris for the production of her albums. In 1993, she took part in the international conductors contest of Besançon.

Her album of Asian original compositions, "Healing music", was in best sales albums in the occidental countries and becomes a very great success.

At the "World Heritage Torch-Run Concert - Missa Johnouchi", organized on the initiative of States through the world, the artist plays piano his own musical works and directs the national orchestras of these countries. She performed in America, China, Tunisia, Italy, Australia, Venezuela, Peru, Canada, Macedonia, Romania or France for commemorative events.

She carries on still nowadays, as much in her own country that abroad, her function of messenger of UNESCO, as she still showed at the time of the exceptional concert to the head office of UNESCO. She was the first Japanese lady "UNESCO Artist for Peace (in charge of the world heritage)" in the section music composition. Following the example of the singer Celine Dion, Sarah Brightman, or the conductor Gergiev, the UNESCO Artists for Peace are famous artists and selected by UNESCO each one in her category.
